

World's progress growth and all round development is indebted to the scientific community. The pace at which the world has progressed during last three decades or so is largely due to extensive R & D in the fields of science and technology specially in medical and IT sectors.

Ironically majority in the countries like ours don't believe in scientific enquiry and reason. At times it is felt as if the mass social psychology is returning to primitive age.

In the absence of regulations social media is providing unlimited time space and spotlight to the lesser known or the unknown. Everyday hundreds of thousands of the so called intellectuals and preachers are there to express their knowledge and skills. Interestingly every now and then they come up with fervent emotional appeals dramatics and religious jargon in a desperate urge to project themselves a savior who is there to unearth every time a new conspiracy theory. In their stocks they have everything except scientific facts and realities and for the sake of leaving good impression messages are recorded usually in audio-visuals to highlight the physical charm and their self-styled oratory skills.

Such malafide or wilful acts create a paranoia and should certainly come under cognizable offence. The groups or the individuals found guilty deserve stringent punishments.
